I personally feel that enough is enough. I understand that various organizations would love to be able to tap into online communications (e-mail, chat, and VOIP). There already exists a way for them to do so. ! ! ! GET A WARRANT ! ! ! Although I understand that various organizations feel that they need to make it easy to do so this will only allow abuses to the system. I want to make it somewhat difficult otherwise every so-called "hacker" will be out there listening in to whatever they feel. With telephones it was difficult enough to listen in because you had to physically attach a line (or get into the switching room at the Phone Company). If we make it easy for the good guys to listen in then we also make it easy for the bad guys as well